Legion protests smoking ban

100 people hit the streets in Kinmount to support veterans

by IZABELA JAROSZYNSKI
Times staff

A hundred supporters of the Kinmount Legion crowded the streets of the small village earlier this week in an attempt to make Peterborough County council reconsider its decision to ban smoking in the group's clubroom. Organizers say that the protest, held on Monday, was a tremendous success.

"We are very pleased with the turnout," said organizer and Legion executive member Moreen

Jones.

Members of surrounding Legions came to support their friends in Kinmount.

John Couton from the Cobocok Legion said he came to the protest to show his disappointment with the new law.

"This smoking ban is hurting the Legions, shutting them down," he said. "It is taking rights away from our veterans."

Jean Jenkins, from the Lindsay branch, said that it is the veterans who are being hurt the most.

"I've never smoked," she said, "but I want to help support the rights of the veterans who started this club. That's why I'm here."

Signs held by protesters accused the government of dictatorship and being insensitive to the rights of veterans.

"They gave us our freedom, now you are taking away theirs," one sign read.

The angry and determined protesters slowed traffic in the main street of Kinmount and solicited support from those passing by.

A petition being circulated garnered 216 signatures and was presented to Peterborough County council on Wednesday.

Lofty Pines saga resolved at OMB

by IZABELA JAROSZYNSKI
Times staff

At a recent series of mediation meetings held by the Ontario Municipal Board, the Lofty Pines saga was put to rest.

About two years ago, Minden Hills council approved a request by the owners of the Lofty Pines cottage resort to rezone the site and accepted a new site agreement that would allow development on the property.

Neighbours appealed the decision, citing concerns with over-development of Lake Kashagawigamog and saying that the developer was attempting to circumvent the requirement of proper lakefront setbacks for new buildings.

The appeal made its way to the OMB, but was resolved last week in mediation before a full hearing could commence.

Allan Bertrand, owner of the Lofty Pines Cottage Resort, said

Let the grass grow, keep the geese out

by IZABELA JAROSZYNSKI
Times staff

A concerned citizen has written to the municipality's park department asking that something be done to control the Canada geese along the Gull River.

Marion Hill of North Water Street suggested that the township allow the grass along the river to grow a few inches to discourage geese climbing up the banks.

"It would be nice if this would eliminate them making the village banks their feeding ground and the river their home," Hill wrote. "We all should be concerned about the health of the many children looking forward to using the river in Minden as their summer playground."

Parks manager Ray Miscio said that he does not believe that growing the grass would solve the problem and instead recommended that council look into hiring a company called he was glad that the proceedings were over, but seemed upset and unsatisfied with the outcome.

"The whole thing left a bad taste in our mouths," he said, but wouldn't comment further.

Elinor Burke, planning administrator for Minden Hills, said the settlement satisfies the municipality.

Kenneth Sinclair, a next-door neighbour and the man who began the appeal process, ceded an easement, or right-of-way, that was necessary for the operation of the resort's sewage system.

Meanwhile, the Bertrands are being forced to downsize the development and comply with setback regulations.

Sinclair says that the right-of-way was a negotiating tool.

"It was a key factor in them having to settle," he said.

At last week's council meeting, Minden Hills council passed two by-laws mandated by the OMB.

The first was an amendment to the previous zoning by-law. It rezoned the property from the Tourist Commercial (C4) and Rural (RU) Zone to the Tourist Commercial Exception 51 (C4-51) Zone. The by-law states that the area previously zoned rural cannot be used for building additional accommodation units, but will be retained for parking, sewage disposal, storage uses and recreational uses such as volleyball and soccer.

Furthermore, the property redevelopment is strictly mandated in a "schedule B" which is also part of the amendment.

The second by-law amends the original site agreement, making changes to such things as the demolition and construction schedule and deleting certain sections.

Sinclair says that he is satisfied with the outcome of the negotiations and will not be pressing the matter further.

Protesters want to smoke

Gary King says that council acknowledged receipt of the petition, but as yet has had no discussion about it.

The protest came as a result of the county's decision to implement a controversial by-law effectively banning smoking in all places of employment, including Legions.

The ban, which was publicized well in advance, came into effect on June 1.

An Omemee Legion member's sign proclaims, "We want smoking in our clubroom."

Knowing that they were included in the ban, the Kinmount Legion approached its local council earlier this year to ask for an exemption on the basis that it is a private club. Their request was forwarded to county council and denied.

King says that a number of Legions in the area have made similar requests and, as far as he knows, council has made no exemptions so far.

"There are a number of Legions that continue to express concern," he said, adding that he understands their position and the important role that Legions play in the communities.

The problem, Jones says, is that not all Legions are on an equal footing.

The Minden and Haliburton branches, located just a few minutes from Kinmount, continue to allow smoking, thus drawing members away from the non-smoking Legions.

In a press release given out during Monday's protest, the Legion stated that since the by-law came into effect on June 1, there has been a 30 per cent decrease in patronage and revenue. "It's a crippling amount for such a small Legion," the press release said. "If a province-wide ban had been imposed, we would all be on a level playing field. However, this is not the case. The no-smoking by-law varies from township to township creating unfair competition."

Making the situation even worse is that the Kinmount branch is about to be hit with a big water bill because of new water regulations. Estimates put the cost between $10,000 and $14,000.

The Legion has been active in the Kinmount community for more than 50 years. It helps to support community events, such as the Canada Day fireworks, the Warriors Day Parade, Decoration Day, Remembrance Day services, and the Christmas Parade.

Hawkeye Bird Control, used by Dysart et al to control its goose problem.

"They pick up the eggs and birds and relocate them south as, apparently, they do not return north," Miscio wrote in his recommendation. "Dysart is very happy with the results and feels that there has been a big decline in the number of geese now in their community."

After contacting the company, Miscio presented council with two options. The first involved chasing the geese with dogs and removing nests. This would cost $550 per visit.

The second option, which would cost $1,950, is to round up, capture, and relocate the geese and goslings.

Miscio recommended that council look into implementing option two in early 2005, both by the river and in Rotary Park.

Council refrained from making a decision, instead deferring the matter to the September meeting. MP Barry Devolin is to be invited to the meeting to discuss federal initiatives towards solving the geese problem.

Wahlroth will likely get OK for lots

by IZABELA JAROSZYNSKI
Times staff

After four years of battling obstacles, it seems that Mike Wahlroth will soon be granted permission by the Ontario Municipal Board to divide his property into four separate lots.

At an OMB hearing earlier this week, Wahlroth was given a three-month extension to prove to the Ministry of Natural Resources and the Ministry of the Environment that he has fulfilled all the conditions set at a previous meeting.

Wahlroth's planner, Margaret Walton, said that they have fulfilled all of the conditions but the government wants to conduct a field study to ensure it has all been done properly.

Wahlroth, whose property is on Moore Lake, first began the process of dividing his lot in 2000, but ran into considerable opposition from neighbours concerned about lake capacity.

Wahlroth says he wants to create the lots for his three children.

The only condition that Wahlroth still needs to meet is the issue of road access. He was granted permission by an adjacent property owner to use the Trillium Road, to which all the property owners living on that road have deeded access. The problem, however, is that, when the road was surveyed, the easiest access route was used and some parts of the road fall onto private land.

Neil Flett, one of the property owners whose back yard is cut short by the road, says that the neighbours would have no issue with Wahlroth using the road as long as it is re-surveyed and moved off their property.

Walton said that Wahlroth will be undertaking the project soon.

Storm hits Carnarvon hard

An early evening storm with high wind, rain and hail, uprooted three-foot wide trees and knocked out power for several hours. The Stanhope Fire Department responded to three storm-related calls regarding downed power lines, spot fires and trees blocking roads. Hail left the ground covered in white. The damage occurred in a swath, leaving some to believe that the storm was tornado related. The damage here is near the Pine Reflections/Carnarvon Garage property, owned by Gina and Nigel Atkins.

Official Plan hits a roadblock

Ministry of Municipal Affairs wants Minden Hills to have deeper setbacks

by IZABELA JAROSZYNSKI
Times staff

Minden Hills has come to a roadblock along the path to getting Ministry of Municipal Affairs approval for their Official Plan.

Recently, the ministry sent back a list of revisions that the municipality has reviewed and is willing to accept, with one exception.

The holdout continues to be the issue of setbacks. Council wants to keep the building setback at 23 metres from the high water mark, but the province is insisting on 30 metres.

Rick Hunter, the township's planning consultant, says that the municipality can either accept the 30 metres or take the fight to the Ontario Municipal Board.

"Frankly, the Ministry is wrong in their interpretation," he said.

However, as Councillor Clayton Cameron pointed out, the former township of Anson, Hindon, and Minden had a 30-metre setback in its OP, which would weaken the municipality's argument.

For the municipality, it is a matter of where the septic system will be placed when new buildings are constructed.

Council argues that if a building is required to be constructed with a 30-metres setback, little room remains at the back of the cottage for the installation of a septic system. Therefore, it will most likely be placed in front of the building and thus closer to the lake.

But with a 23-metre setback, more room is left in the back where the system would preferably go.

Hunter was asked to send back the township's response to the ministry and ask for a reconsideration of the issue.

Bigger engine impresses Minden Hills councillors

by IZABELA JAROSZYNSKI
Times staff

The following are brief notes from last Thursday's Minden Hills general council meeting.

Council approved the purchase of a new ice resurfacer from Olympia for $69,015.

On July 19 Ray Miscio, the township's parks and recreation manager, opened up bidding for the new machine.

Two quotes were submitted during the bidding process, one from Zamboni and one from Olympia.

Although the other quote, from Zamboni, came in lower, Miscio recommended that council buy the machine offered by Olympia.

"While Zamboni appears to be cheaper, it is a much smaller machine," he wrote in a memo to council. "It has a 2.5 litre, four-cylinder engine, compared to the Olympia which has a five litre, eight cylinder motor."

The larger machine, he concluded, is "more suitable for our needs."

The old ice resurfacer will be sold to an interested buyer.

U-Links thank you

Council received a letter of thanks from Marie Gage, chair of the U-Links

Management Committee, for its continuing support of the program.

Currently, council is covering the overhead expenses for the organization while it occupies space at the Pritchard House during the municipal building construction.

In her letter, Gage expressed her appreciation for council's commitment to making U-Links a part of the community.

In return, Gage says she hopes U-Links can be of assistance to the municipality.

"If there are issues that have been identified that require research in order for council to make informed decisions, I encourage you to get in touch with our coordinator, Kate Hall, to discuss these needs and how we can assist the municipality in solving current challenges in our community," she wrote.

County Fair

Council will designate the Haliburton County Fair as a "community festival."

This new designation will allow the Fair to apply to the LCBO for a one-time licence fee for the whole event, instead of having to have a new licence for each activity. This will save the committee $75 per event.

Council has given this designation to the Fair in the past.

Environmental Assessment appeal demands Frost Centre be re-opened

The provincial government is being asked to stop the process of closing the Frost Centre because it violates the Environmental Assessment Act.

An application for a Class Environmental Assessment has been submitted to the Ministry of Environment. It demands the following:

- that a "cease and desist order be instituted immediately to prevent further removal of all resources integral to the function and operation of the Frost Centre prior to July 14, 2004." This order should include the re-establishment of normal operations at the Frost by August 16 and that all resources which have been removed from the centre be returned.

- that "all aspects and operations of the Frost Centre be re-established to preserve the status quo that existed prior to the July 14 closing of the Frost Centre, before any EA process that considers the future use of the Centre commences";

- that the MOE bump up the Class Environmental Assessment, which the province had already agreed to undertake before a new owner is chosen, to an Individual Environment Assessment;

The detailed submission outlines areas where the province is accused of breaking the rules of the Environmental Assessment Act for Resource Stewardship and Facility Development.

- the Class EA requires that the proponent of any project must pay attention to public concern. In fact, the language in the Class EA treats public concern equally with negative environmental effects.

- Public concern over Frost Centre closure has been ignored and obviously not anticipated.

- An EA was not initiated; therefore options other than closure were not adequately considered, including preserving the status quo, which is a mandated option. Since the status quo has been drastically altered, therefore the MNR is breach of the EA Act.

- The social, economic and cultural impacts of closure have been huge and have not been considered or ignored. A required environmental assessment would have considered all impacts.

"The Frost Centre's closure has affected all Ontarians, whether they care about outdoor education, the environment or public accountability," says Josh Matlow, a Toronto school board trustee and campaign director of Earthroots. "This EA request could put a freeze on the sale of the Frost".

"The MNR has misjudged how interwoven the Frost Centre is within the fabric of southern Ontario," said Linnea Baynton of Save the Frost and Haliburton resident. "We would have expected them to, at the very least, follow the law and consult with the public."

Meanwhile the Save the Frost Centre Group says it will continue a vigorous campaign to keep the Leslie M. Frost Centre as a Natural Resource Centre for generations to come.

The MOE is under no deadline to grant the request for the review.

MNR cool to the idea of turning Frost Centre into provincial park

by MARTHA PERKINS
Times Staff

Mark Lowell, just retired from a seven-year term on the board that oversees Ontario's provincial parks, is endorsing the idea of turning the Frost Centre into Ontario Parks' latest family members.

But the Ministry of Natural Resources remains cool to the idea.

Although it would mean that user fees would have to be charged, "at least it wouldn't be as bad as having it sold," Lowell said in a telephone interview.

But an even stronger of an argument in favour of the plan is Lowell's belief that the government could be easily sold on it.

"It would protect the value of the Frost Centre and the government wouldn't have to do a whole bunch of work on this," he says. "Once cabinet agrees, that's half of it. Then they can find ways to make it work for them..."

"It sounds like it's an insurmountable problem but it's actually quite easy."

Other provincial parks, such as the Kawartha Lakes Signature Site, have already broken the mold of what we expect a provincial park to be, Lowell says. The Frost Centre could largely operate as it has, only charging day user fees and overnight camping fees. The average cost is $7.50 for day use and $22 for overnight camping. He's not suggesting setting up campsites within the interior of the Frost Centre's 24,000 hectares; instead, the Frost Centre could make more overnight use of its existing facilities.

"The mechanics are in place to do it," he says, echoing sentiments previously expressed by former MPP, Chris Hodgso, who had a stint as Minister of Natural Resources. "Deals can be made," Lowell says. "The end result is that it's preserved as a park and allowed to make money. Most parks generate 85 to 87 per cent of their revenue so it's a much more stable arm of the government to have."

"I've spent a lot of nights there and I'd sooner have people paying than not have it. That's just the way it is."

The first step would be to form a group which would make the application to the Minister of Natural Resources. Lowell suggests enlisting the help of Adair Ireland-Smith, an MNR director out of the Peterborough office. "She wouldn't be a bad person to get on the team."

He also suggests enlisting the help of a wide range of groups from the Sierra Defense League to the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters. The more partners working on the project, the better. "At a time like this it's not about choosing sides, it's about putting pressure on the government."

When contacted by the Times, however, Ireland-Smith dismissed the idea of turning the Frost Centre into a provincial park. "There had been discussions over the years about that and the Haliburton centre doesn't really fit the park mandate."

The 24,000 hectares of Crown land will remain, allowing existing uses, but "we don't have any use for the facility." She says there would be "significant costs" to upgrade and maintain the buildings and "the financial drain would put fiscal restraints on the rest of the system."

Twelve Mile seeks new members

Spiny water flea also a hot topic at lake association meeting

by SHERYL LOUCKS
Times Staff

The Twelve Mile and Little Boshkung Lake Association has a new president, Sue Pethick, who will be taking up the mandate to increase membership.

The association's annual general meeting, held last weekend at The Pepper Mill, yielded a vote to try and double the membership. The rallying point will be environmental issues such as the impending invasion of the spiny water flea, which is now in neighbouring lakes. The members also decided to raise the membership fee to $25.

The association has very little left in the kitty but did decide to continue making an annual $250 donation to Haliburton Highlands Health Services. A new financial commitment will be made to join the Waterfront Ratepayers After Fair Tax group. The new WRAFT group is dedicated to lobbying the government to ensure cottagers are not being hit with exorbitant taxes.

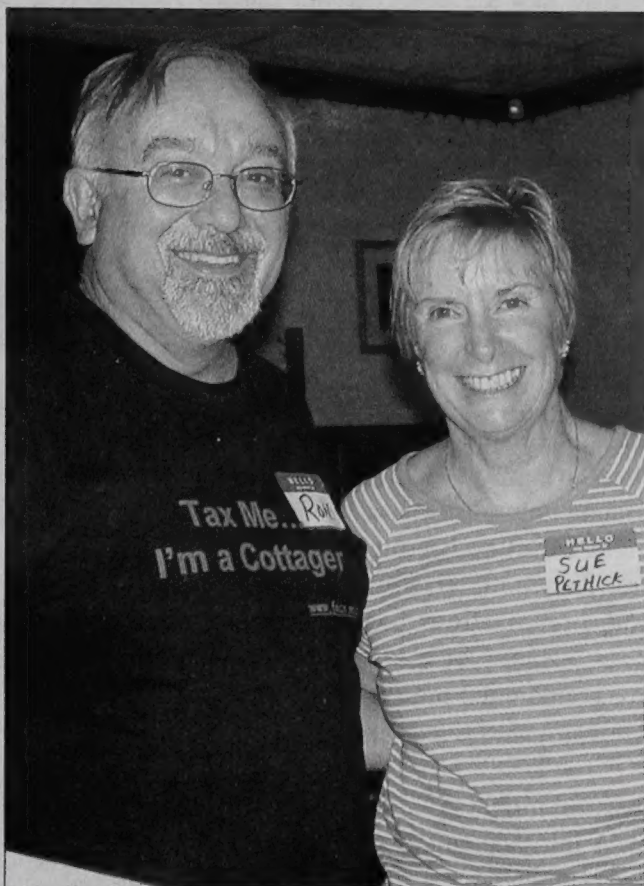

MPAC

Members learned from their guest speaker that they had one of the lower property assessment hikes in the county. Mark Doble, Municipal Property Assessment Corporation communications manager, said the average assessment increase on the two lakes in the last review was 14 per cent.

He says the numbers for Twelve Mile and Little Boshkung are based on 369 properties and 27 open market sales. Based on those open market sales, properties are selling for six per cent more than they have been assessed. He says the increase on the two lakes is also not bad considering that Miskwabi's 174 properties were assessed at an average of 40 per cent more and Drag Lake's 340 properties had an average increase of 34 per cent.

He says anyone interested in getting the assessment numbers for comparable properties can do so for free at www.mpac.ca.

Doble says MPAC's numbers are getting better and better. He says there were only 10 requests for reconsideration on Twelve Mile and Little Boshkung and all of them have been resolved. A request for reconsideration can be done at any time whereas an actual appeal, a more formal process, has to be filed by March 31. He says MPAC is considering trying to get that date changed to give property owners more time to appeal assessments.

The assessment dates are also going to be changing to a January 1 date in 2005 and assessments will be done annually in the future.

He was asked how often inspectors come out to see properties. He replied that an inspection is done to follow up significant building permits or once every five to seven years. In response to another question, he says students are only used to assess minor changes such as the addition of a deck.

FOCA

Following Doble was Ron Bilyk, the Federation of Ontario Cottage Associations' president, who was wearing a "Tax me... I'm a cottager" T-shirt. Bilyk has a cottage on Twelve Mile Lake. He says FOCA is starting its own membership drive this year and is continuing to focus on septic systems, lake capacity, shoreline management and environmental issues. He says this year FOCA will formalize the position of a liaison with the government and work harder at communicating with member associations and the public.

Bilyk says FOCA is also a strong advocate against the closure of the Leslie M. Frost Natural Resources Centre. He says FOCA used the centre regularly for sessions and workshops and a lot of their members attended various training sessions there. He says FOCA is willing to lend its voice to the cause and try to force the government into a more transparent way of operating.

Stephen Foster, 911 co-ordinator, warned people not to dial 911 yet an emergency, because the call goes to a call centre in Sudbury, Lindsay, Smith Falls or other places where the operator does not have local addressing information.

The number to call is 1-888-310-1122 for police assistance or 457-1721 for an ambulance. He did say people can give the local emergency personnel their 911 number if the plate is up since it will help the emergency personnel find the property.

Foster says they are currently working with Bell to complete the data transfer to make the system work. However, only 65 per cent of the new signage is up. He also admitted that Twelve Mile Road was one of their "goofs" but will be properly signed.

Notification of when the new 911 system is active will be placed in newspapers and on the radio and through lake associations.

Common ground

It's interesting how a situation can unite groups that, for the most part, are in opposition to each other. The closing of the Leslie M. Frost Natural Resources Centre is one such situation.

For example, Earthroots and the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters, although both conservation-minded organizations in their own ways, seldom agree on anything that involves hunting the province's fauna natural resources or providing access to remote areas for hunters and anglers. But both groups are adamantly opposed to the closure of the Frost Centre. They both recognize the importance of outdoor education. Members of both organizations have benefitted from programs at the Frost.

They are just two of dozens of organizations that have condemned the government for its decision to close an educational institution with an 83-year history.

Operation of the Frost Centre, the government says, was running a deficit of $1.2-million annually. What the government hasn't taken into account is the bargain basement prices other government ministries and agencies have traditionally paid for services at the Frost. If the charges were consistent across the board for services provided by the Frost Centre, it has been estimated that the annual deficit would be in the neighbourhood of $400,000.

That, by comparison, is exactly the amount of money the provincial Liberals pumped into Caribana, Toronto's two and a half week street festival.

We're not necessarily opposed to the government spending such a sum on cultural extravaganzas such as Caribana. It does bring millions of dollars into Toronto. But we believe that the education provided by the Frost Centre is even more valuable than the entertainment value provided by Caribana.

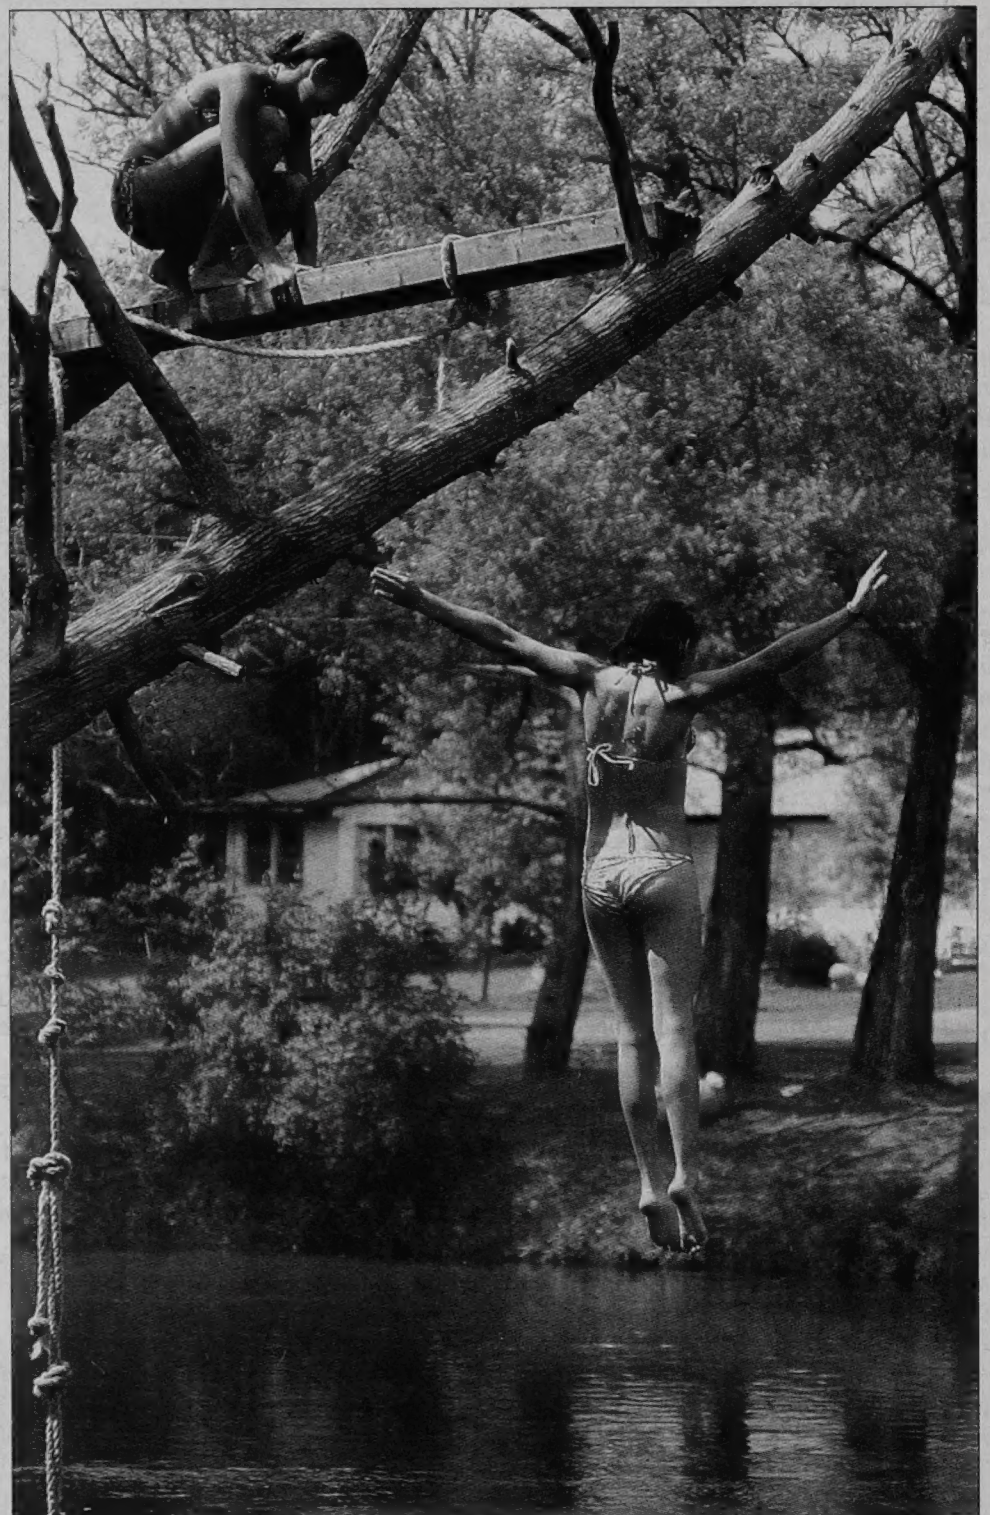

How could anyone believe that the two and a half weeks of Caribana is more important than the year-round educational opportunities offered by the Frost Centre?

Caribana is just one example of an event that is subsidized by the provincial government. There are undoubtedly hundreds of others that could be held up for comparison. If the government can find the funds to support cultural events like Caribana, it certainly should be able to come up with enough to keep the Frost operating.

Natural Resources Minister David Ramsay's statement that his ministry isn't in the education business is ridiculous. The ministry's mission statement says: "The ministry is committed to protecting and managing the province's natural resources, or its 'natural capital', and making the interest from that capital available for individuals, communities and economies that depend on it. In doing so, the Ministry contributes to the environmental, social and economic well-being of the people of Ontario, meeting not only today's needs, but also ensuring these resources are available for future generations."

How can that mission statement possibly be accomplished without an educational component? The production and distribution of the annual hunting and fishing summaries, the production of countless pamphlets addressing everything from bear-proofing to shoreline management is education. Sending conservation officers into classrooms to deliver messages regarding the management of the province's natural resources is education. Unless people are educated about conservation and the laws that enforce the Game and Fish Act and other responsibilities of the MNR, how can they be expected to act appropriately?

The overwhelming majority of Ontarians, including organizations which are otherwise in opposition to each other, are in favour of preserving the Frost Centre. Everyone, it seems, can appreciate the value of outdoor education - except the provincial Liberals. jg

Premier defends closing Frost

To the Editor:

The following letter was first sent to Cathy Olliffe by Premier Dalton McGuinty.

Thank you for writing to me regarding the closure of the Leslie M. Frost Natural Resources Centre. I appreciate the time you took to share your views with me.

Over the past several months, my colleagues and I asked Ontarians to tell us what their priorities are. We sought public input through citizens' dialogues, Budget town halls, pre-Budget meetings and online participation. The people of Ontario were clear in telling us that they want better public education, more accessible health care, a more vibrant economy, stronger communities and a greater say in the democratic process.

Based on what we heard, our government is transforming public services so we can concentrate on the priorities you and your fellow Ontarians value most - and give you the results you asked us to deliver. But, in light of the tremendous deficit we inherited, one much larger than anticipated, we need to refocus our efforts on core ministry programs and businesses to make that happen. Getting there means making some very tough decisions. The decision by the Ministry of Natural Resources to close the Frost Centre was one of them.

Our government recognizes that the Frost Centre has a long history and we are proud of its contribution over the years. Given the current fiscal realities in our province, closure was the Ministry of Natural Resources' only viable option: it has been pouring $1.2 million per year into the training centre and is simply no longer able to sustain the heavy subsidization of a program not directly aligned with

Columnists and Letters to the Editor

Playing chicken

We've all heard of nuisance bears. Some of us have dealt with nuisance deer, geese and raccoons, too. But down in Key West, Florida they've got an even more insidious problem - they're dealing with nuisance chickens. As you would expect, the residents are crying fowl.

It got so bad that the municipal chicken catcher, who has, so far, collected a twenty-dollar bounty on more than 500 bothersome chickens, has decided to quit in order to pursue a freelance chicken-catching career. He thinks there will be more money in it. I guess you can't blame a man for trying to feather his own nest.

But it makes you wonder. I mean, exactly how many chickens roam the streets of Key West? And why?

I'm guessing that this is a town full of vegetarians. Either that or very fast chickens.

As a man who knows his way around chickens — and I mean that in a purely wholesome way — I'd like to offer a less expensive solution to the good folks of Key West.

First and foremost, I'd advise them to open several roving Kentucky Fried Chicken stands. Just flying the Colonel's colours in those chicken-infested streets ought to be enough to move the smarter birds up the road to another town - especially if they've watched the recent video.

Those left, however, will be the hard-boiled cases.

It is for these smarter birds that I have perfected my latest invention, the Galea artificial chicken road (patent pending).

Though complex in technology, it's based on the well-known scientific fact that chickens cross the road in order to get to the other side. The idea then is to lure these chickens out into a field where they'll happen upon the Galea artificial chicken road (patent pending), which in essence is a small circular track. If you have a hard time envisioning this, recall Sesame Street and think of the letter O, the letter O.

BEYOND35

Steve Galea

Naturally, when confronted with such an obstacle the chickens will want to cross the road to fulfill this age-old biological imperative. Which is when the trap is sprung. Once they get there, suddenly and without warning, they'll find themselves surrounded by road on all sides. Being chickens, they'll have no choice but to cross again. It's part of their genetic disposition. They can't help it.

Having succeeded in navigating to the outside of the track, they'll be lulled into a false sense of security. This will prompt them to look back to sneer in that chicken-like way at where they've come from. That's when they'll see the Galea's artificial chicken road (patent pending) once more. At this, they'll be drawn to cross it yet again. Thus a perpetual cycle begins, where the chickens cross back and forth until, ultimately, they collapse from exhaustion.

That's when the chickens are transferred to an advanced chicken holding facility that I call the barbecue.

I envision that my simple invention will change the world forever; much in the same way that penicillin did for the sex trade. Soon towns and cities plagued by street chickens will thank me and perhaps even provide me with a key to the city. This will be purely symbolic, since most of them also rely on several deadbolts.

Even so, I might go down in history as the man who solved one of the great problems of our time. But beware, this only works with chickens. All other animals, bear, raccoons, weasels, cats and dogs included, run the risk of getting hit by passing cars.

Which might be why Key West has so many chickens.

Little Brown Birds

The words come quickly when you're crafting a column about Wild Turkeys or Great Blue Herons but it isn't easy finding something useful to say about Little Brown Birds.

Bird watchers will sit up all night sipping herbal tea and trading tall tales of Red-Eyed Vireos and Rufous-Sided Towhees, but they rarely give Little Brown Birds a second thought. Clearly, Vireos and Towhees have better press agents.

There isn't even an entry for Little Brown Birds in the Atlas of the Breeding Birds of Ontario and nobody at the Ministry of Natural Resources seems to know anything at all about them.

And yet I have come to the conclusion that they certainly are the dominant avian species on my 50 acres of what used to be Anson Township.

Little Brown Birds are easy enough to identify. To begin with, they are small in stature and brownish in colour. That's just about all you need to know.

They flit about at all hours of the day and night, travelling hither and yon, singing this song and that, but they are most commonly seen at dusk, sitting backlit on a high branch on the third ridge over.

If you start imagining that you may be looking at a bird of some other more well-publicized species, about the time you have it narrowed down to one of 19 possibilities, it will leave abruptly just as you are about to start counting its toes and then you can be sure it is a Little Brown Bird.

After careful and exhaustive research and miles of walking with The Brown Dog Jiggs, I can state unequivocally that virtually all of the birds on my 50 acres are of the Little Brown persuasion.

Of course, there is no such species as the Little Brown Bird, which is probably why it didn't make the cut for the Peterson Guide or even get capital letters, for that matter. Little brown bird is the name given by some real birders to the rare song or sighting they can't identify.

Since both Jiggs and I have trouble identifying any bird that doesn't have one of those conventioneer's labels pasted to its breast saying, "Hi, I'm a Pine Siskin," just about everything we see turns out to be a little brown bird.

Mind you, we aren't quite as thick as we look. I'd have to be dumber than a bag of hammers to spend 25 years of living off and on among the swamps of Anson without figuring out something about all the twittering and fluttering going on all around me.

A few nights of hearing a Barred Owl carry on like George W. Bush at a Republican fundraiser and you can't help but wonder what all the racket is about so you go out and buy enough bird books to make your cabin floor sag with the weight of them.

Wear a bright red baseball cap from the 1993 International Plowing Match outside often enough and you soon find out what a Ruby-Throated Hummingbird is and learn to duck.

Keep company with The Brown Dog Jiggs and you'll learn that the bird that keeps laughing at his squirrel-hunting technique is a Pileated Woodpecker. The Pileated's outbursts of hilarity are almost enough to drown out the guffaws of the squirrels.

BACK OF BEYOND

Neil Campbell

Chickadees, Downy and Hairy Woodpeckers, Purple Finches, Evening Grosbeaks, Nuthatches, Goldfinches and Juncos will start showing at my feeder again just as soon as the black bear next door lets me know I can fill it up again.

So it is that I have a list of 40 or so birds I imagine that I might be able to identify if only they would land on my porch railing and sit there perfectly still for a half hour or so.

Not many little brown birds will ever make that list. The closest I'll get is to develop a theory about what might be at the other end of my binoculars.

There is some comfort in knowing that most of the little browns are songbirds and that the sweet serenades they sing are actually strings of male profanity directed at other males of whatever their ilk happens to be.

My ears are far too tender for all of those cusswords so I'll stick to birds with calls, the ones I recognize, the crows, the bluejays and the woodpeckers and Jiggs will stick with his squirrels.

To the Editor:

To all supporters and participants in HAVE's Choose Your Own Adventure 2004:

The Help A Village Effort (H.A.V.E) committee wishes to thank everyone for your support. We have drilled 50 new wells in 50 villages again in 2004.

HAVE began in 1982 and we now have put in over 600 wells. When you live in an area that is so blessed with an abundance of fresh water, providing fresh drinking water to those less fortunate is awesome. Our goal of $10,000 to provide 10 wells from the Haliburton area is within reach. If you have supported one of our walkers in our annuals Walk for Water..Thank You. If you still wish to help us, we can be reached at 489-2431 or HAVE, Box 553, Minden, Ont. K0M 2K0.

Our main fundraisers are Walk for Water and while Haliburton used to provide the only event and still remains the headquarters for the organization, we now have several chapters of HAVE. This year we had eight Walks in various parts of Canada from Newfoundland to Vancouver Island. It's amazing how a little dream that started so many years ago is still bringing hope, help and fresh water to thousands of needy villagers every year through your support for HAVE. Help us reach our goal won't you?

Premier promised to listen, so listen

one of its core functions. Closure of the facility will result in savings of $7 million over four years – savings that will go directly toward key, priority programs crucial to improving quality of life for all Ontarians.

Despite the challenges we face, our government remains committed to achieving the results Ontarians deserve. I support the Ministry of Natural Resources' efforts to better align funding toward those results.

I hope I have been able to shed some light on the reasons for a decision that was not easy, but necessary. I am returning your enclosure, as it would be inappropriate for me to accept it. Thank you again for sharing your concerns with me. Your input is always welcome.

Dalton McGuinty
Premier

The following letter was sent to the Premier McGuinty in response.

Dear Premier McGuinty:

Thank you for responding to my letter regarding the Leslie M. Frost Centre. I appreciate the time you took to share your views with me.

But I see you returned the four dimes that I sent you, as part of the "Dimes to Dalton" campaign. I want you to keep those dimes, directing them to pay for the $1.2 million you claim it costs to run every year. People have figured out that if everyone Ontarian sends you a dime, you will have enough money to reopen the Frost. So keep it! You have said, repeatedly, that money is the only reason it is being closed. If money is the reason, here's some money. If money's not the reason, then what, exactly, is going on?

I also want to point out a few inaccuracies in your letter to me. You wrote, "The people of Ontario were clear in telling us that they want better public education, more accessible healthcare, a more vibrant economy, stronger communities and a greater say in the democratic process." Premier, we agree.

1. Better public education. There is no better way to teach education about the outdoors than sending inner city kids and adults to the Frost Centre where they are given an amazing, wonderful, curriculum-based education that creates in them a lifelong passion for the environment.

2. A more vibrant economy. By closing the Frost Centre you put 31 people out of work in the second poorest county in all of the province.

3. Stronger communities. The one thing

Haliburton County does have going for it, is it is a mecca for outdoor education on many levels: children's camps, the Haliburton Wildlife Preserve, Kinark and much more. But don't be fooled, the Frost Centre provided a completely different, curriculum-based program; it was the best of the best. Why on earth would you want to close its doors? The Frost really did help create a stronger community in Haliburton County.

4. A greater say in the democratic process. This is what really gets my goat, if you'll pardon the expression. Your office has been deluged by people saying "save the Frost." I'll bet you have received hardly any letters saying, "close the Frost." If you truly want people to have a greater say in the democratic process, then use your power to open it again. You promised you would listen to people, better than the Conservatives. Well, listen. OK?

5. You say you had to close it to save money. But you closed it without public consultation or asking anybody around here if they had any ideas how to get money to save it. You are ignoring a wealth of fundraising experience; a wealth of intellect; a wealth of people who would be on your side if you were willing to be more open to new partnerships and ideas. It worked when the Ministry of Tourism partnered with the Ministry of Education. It could work now, if other ministries and other levels of government as well as individuals were to work together to keep the Frost alive and paying its own way. But we need the government to take the reins. Nobody can provide this kind of service alone. And nobody is asking the province to shoulder the responsibility by itself. We need to work together.

What needs to happen, Mr. Premier, is a meeting. You need to come to Haliburton County, tour the Frost Centre and meet with our local government representatives as well as representatives of the Save the Frost committee. You need to open your mind to new ideas and new partnerships.

You said it yourself: we need a greater say in the democratic process. We need stronger communities, not empty buildings. We need a vibrant economy. We need better public education.

And have you ever thought of the benefits of preventative healthcare that the Frost Centre espouses and provides? Outdoor activities such as canoeing, hiking and cross-country skiing all provide fitness and healthy bodies.

If you take the time to read this letter and really "get" what I am telling you, you will understand that the Frost Centre must be saved. Please take my dimes and use them wisely.

Guess what? July was a very wet month in the Highlands

by PHIL GRAHAM
Special to The Times

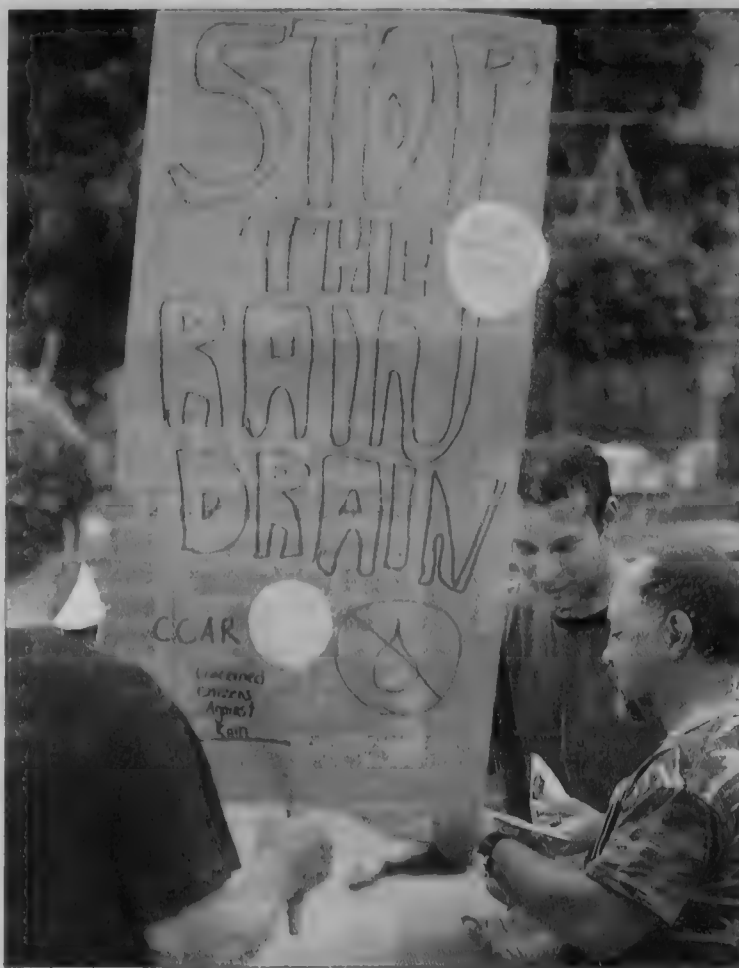

July was a soaker – it seemed like the monsoon season hit us. Rain and more rain. The period from July 14 to July 17 was very wet, the same time Peterborough got the flooding. In that period we got 80 mm (3.1 inches).

With all the clouds and rain the average temperature was 19.3° C, exactly the same as last July, probably due to the average low temperature at night. The rainfall was double this July: 6.9 inches versus 3.6 inches last July.

Trivia: The answer to the question from last month is that lightning strikes would most likely occur locally in fields that would include golf courses.

Average high: 25.3° C, 77.5° F
Average low: 13.3° C, 55.9° F
Average for the month: 19.3° C, 66.7° F
Average for last July: 19.3° C, 66.7° F
Highest temperature: July 22: 30.5° C 86.0° F
Lowest temperature: July 24: ° C, ° F
Rain: 176.0mm, 6.9 in Snow: 0
Total precipitation: 176.0 mm, 6.9 in Total precipitation for last July: 91.6 mm, 3.6 in Days mostly sunny: 9
Days with snow or rain: 11
Days with thunderstorms: 7

Rain, rain go away

It seems to be the summer of protest. First it was to save the Frost Centre and then this week it was to let the Legionnaires continue to smoke at the Kinmount Legion. County Life Slackers Andy Lloyd and Steve Galea got in the spirit when their day off got cancelled because of the rain. So they took to the streets to get people to sign a petition against the rain. They got almost 50 signatures in the first hour. See next week's County Life to see if their protest fell on deaf ears (they're probably water logged.)

Minden teen golfer competes at national level.

by JERRY GROZELLE
Times Staff

At 15 years of age, Mike Lennox of Minden has a long and promising golf career ahead of him.

Lennox recently finished in the top 45 of the Ontario Provincial Junior Golf Championship to qualify for the Royal Canadian Golf Association's 66th Canadian Junior Championship in Vancouver.

Mike and his dad Andy caught a flight to Vancouver Sunday. Mike was scheduled to start competition Tuesday morning at the Marine Drive Golf Club. Monday the club was reserved for practice rounds.

The tournament runs from Tuesday to Friday (today).

Lennox finished 38th at the provincial championship. He says he didn't play as well as he is able to, noting that he planned to save his best game for the Canadian championship. "I hope to do better this time."

The provincial championship was held last week at the Wildfire Golf Course in Lakefield, a new par-72 course that has only been open for a year. Lennox played four rounds, scoring 77, 74, 78 and 77.

The Marine Drive course in Vancouver is a par-70 and Lennox has set a goal of 293-294 for the four rounds, or in the 73-74 range per round. He hopes to finish in the top 10 of the 16-and-under division.

After two rounds, Lennox was in the middle of the pack of 165 golfers. He started off with a 76 on Tuesday and followed with an 81 Wednesday. His mom Val said he was very frustrated when she talked to him Wednesday evening.

Fifteen-year-old Mike Lennox is ranked among the top 20 players in Canada at his age. When he gets back from the junior national championships in Vancouver this week, he'll go to hockey tryouts in Lindsay before heading back to his home course in the Highlands, Delta Pinestone.

He was hoping to get back into his usual form for Thursday's round.

Real-time scores were posted on the Royal Canadian Golf Association website (www.rcga.org) throughout the tournament.

Mike's home course is Delta Pinestone, where he spends almost every day. His coach is Ken Rosenberg. When he's not on the course at Delta Pinestone, Mike practises his drives at Haliburton Driving Range on Haliburton County Road 1.

Lennox said he really appreciates the help of his coach Ken Rosenberg and his wife Deanna. He also sends his thanks to Harry Baker, the director of golf at Delta Pinestone and the staff and to Shannon, the beverage girl, "for keeping me hydrated," he says. Delta Pinestone also arranged for him to have free accommodation at Delta Vancouver. (As an amateur he can only accept assistance for the actual costs of competition.)

Mike said he couldn't participate on the level he does without the support of his parents Andy and Val.

Golf isn't the only sport at which Mike Lennox excels. He will return from Vancouver tomorrow (Saturday) and Monday he will be going to Lindsay for the tryouts for the Central Ontario Wolves Minor Midget hockey team. He is a goalie.

Highland Yard races through Minden

The 33rd annual Highland Yard race was held in Minden on July 30, with more than 300 runners participating in the 7.4 kilometre race. The race is run as a fundraising event in support of the Amici Camping Charity. The charity, which supports summer camps across Ontario, uses the money to help send kids to camp. In this area, Amici supports Medeba, Kilcoo, Kandalore, Onondaga and YMCA Wanakita. Mike Logue, a South Lake cottager at left, won the race this year, for the second year in a row. He's a long-distance runner on the University of Waterloo running team. Logue also won the Rotary Mile race in Haliburton last Wednesday.

Unfortunately, attempts to discover the name of the top female runner, at right, were unsuccessful.

Minden Museum collection grows

by MEGHAN KERNOHAN
Special to The Times

If you've ever been to the Minden Hills Museum then you know there is a lot to look at and learn about. Each building has an incredible amount of history about the area stored within its walls as well as artifacts, pictures, and antiques from times long past. With all of this history within fingers' reach, it is a wonder how the dedicated staff at the Minden Hills Museum can remember what each piece is about.

The Minden Hills Museum Collection consists of 2,552 artifacts on record. This number includes 1,520 objects, 301 photographs, 341 archival materials, and 390 books. That is a lot of history.

However, the number of artifacts grows every year: artifacts without paperwork that must be assessed, and pieces with lost paperwork that were not assessed upon arrival. These artifacts are spread out amongst seven buildings, all accessible and available for your viewing pleasure. To date only 689 artifacts have been processed and catalogued, approximately 25%.

Erin Kernohan, a Minden resident and fourth-year student at the University of Waterloo, was the Minden Hills Museum collections 'assistant from mid-April to the end of June this year. Through hard work and dedication, a concentrated mind and a good work ethic, she was able to catalogue all of the valuable information that comes with each artifact into a electronic collections database.

When cataloguing, Erin had to write a detailed condition report which included all of the physical aspects of the artifact. A digital photo was then taken and everything logged into the collection's database for long-term storage. Some research had to be done at times to make sure the artifact had historical ties to Minden, but all was done with a smiling face and a dedicated heart. Not all of the cataloguing is finished; 75% is left to be done. Erin hopes she can return next summer and continue the task.

If you've driven by the Agnes Jamieson Gallery recently, you will have noticed a large, flat piece of cleared ground next to the week. Remember, the Gallery is now open every Thursday until 8pm.

There are some great events coming up that you should not miss. On August 20th from 7p.m. to 9p.m you can travel Europe through a wine and beer-tasting evening. You will travel through France and discover what fine wines and beers can be found there. Registration is a must and the event will be held at the Agnes Jamieson

Artist's concept of the expansion of the Agnes Jamieson Gallery and Museum complex, now underway the building. You've probably scratched your head and wondered, "What is that for?" The Agnes Jamieson Gallery Expansion is underway. That piece of ground will soon be a wonderful, log-style building that will house the Gallery's permanent collection of André Lapine paintings.

Don't worry though, the library and gallery are still open regular hours during Gallery.

Hey shutterbugs! Here is your chance to display some of your finest photos. A Juried Photo Exhibition is coming to the Agnes Jamieson Gallery from August 18th to September 19th. The opening exhibition will be on Saturday August 21st from 2 - 4 p.m. A panel of professional photographers will judge the work. There are several categories to choose from,

1. Black and White or Sepia - Give it that aged look, or an extra spooky feeling.

2. The "High" of Haliburton County - Let's see what you can come up with. What is the "High" of Haliburton For you?

3. Nature - Animal - Anything with furry paws, big bold eyes, or feathers are welcome.

4. Nature - Flora - Get out into the wild, see what you can discover.

5. Portrait/People - Your best friend, an elderly woman, children playing in the river, or a silhouette on a pristine wall. Let your mind run.

6. Digital Manipulation - Create worlds, show what colour can do, photo negative effects, the options are endless.

7. Comedy Relief - What tickles your funny bone? Try it.

Every competition has rules, so here they are: Photos must be taken by Entry Artist. Entries must be professionally framed, meaning framed and matted, with no glass-clipped frames. There must be picture wire on the back of the framed piece. Photographers may only enter one photo per category. Works must have name and phone number on the back and, if wanted, price for sale. The Gallery has a 25% commission on sales. There is no limit to size. Judges' decisions are final. Be creative, show your stuff. You can submit at any time. Just drop off your piece, or pieces, at the Agnes Jamieson Gallery with all the proper information.

Remember, if you're looking for a place to volunteer, the Agnes Jamieson Gallery and the Minden Hills Museum are always looking for help. We hope to see you come out. For any extra information, call either the Agnes Jamieson Gallery at 286 - 3763 or the Minden Hills Museum at 286 - 3154.

Art in the Street program popular in Minden and Haliburton

The Art in the Street program continues. Each Wednesday in Haliburton in front of the Village Barn and Thursday in Minden in the gazebo on the Village Green from 11am-3 p.m., a local artist will be displaying and presenting their work. This week, the Arts Council is proud to feature Grahame Wales in Haliburton on August 11 and Donna Bisschop in Minden on August 12.

Grahame Wales, the local "Hairy Potter," will be demonstrating his skill on the pottery wheel this Wednesday in Haliburton. Don't miss his "functional and one-of-a-kind" pieces.

On August 12, Donna Bisschop brings her original designs and fine art to the Village Green in Minden. Donna's unique blend of Native and Celtic heritage comes through in her works, whether it be water-colour, acrylic paint, pen & ink, or sculpture.

Come to Minden and see her intricate designs combining nature and celtic knotwork.

If you would like more information on the artists or the Art in the Street program please call Vanessa at 457-3555 or send an e-mail to artscouncil@halhinet.on.ca.
